Biography

Bisan Toron is an experimental world music vocal artist and voice teacher.

Born in Syria and raised in Paris and New York, Bisan studied classical voice performance at NYU and holds masters in Ethnomusicology from the University of London, School of Oriental and African Studies. She did further studies in voice and improvisation with the Roy Hart-based company, Pantheatre in France.

Her music is informed by a multitude of cultures and vocal traditions, which she threads with vocal articulations that arise from the moment. Her music and teaching is grounded in the process of re-imagining the voice as a “muscle of the soul,” bridging the chasm between our inner landscape and what we actually express through sound. Bisan’s debut CD is entitled ‘Backstage Reveries, Voice Sketches by Bisan Toron.’ Her second album, ‘Toward the Roar,’ was released in 2015. Most recently, Bisan was featured as a composer and vocalist in the upcoming film, NYsferatu due for release in late 2017.

Bisan was voice professor at ESADIB, National College of Dramatic Arts in Mallorca, Spain from 2008-2010. Currently, she teaches master classes, workshops and private lessons independently across Europe and the United States.

“Bisan’s voice is a delight to the ear and heart. Her approach is not traditional. It is an experimental search for the right expression of inner landscape and yearning. Her work comes in the footsteps of giants such as Meredith Monk but her style is more personal and unpredictable yet rooted in a distant Middle Eastern heritage.”

The Boundless Voice

To voice is to practice opening, with movement, to what wants to enter and live through the full exhalation. As amplified breath, vocalization involves the conscious, physical act of managing energy – a co-creating with Life. The question becomes: How can the body/voice meet the moment in full resonance? Is the energy as free as it can be? From this perspective, the voice is not a thing but rather, a capacity that surpasses boundaries and is not beholden to any single texture, color or mode. It's the boundless cascade of life itself breathing through you, in constant, intimate communion.

- Bisan Toron

"In my opinion Bisan Toron is a miracle worker. I don't think I have ever seen anyone teach with so much wisdom, clarity, and energy. We will be having Bisan back many times in the future. She does more than teach music. She changes lives."

Voice Creature Work

We have many voices within us - different aspects of our self which long to be released, sounded and embodied. I call these often marginalized and suppressed dimensions within us "voice creatures." As we practice connecting our deep emotions to our sound, we uncover a variety and range of vocal colors and textures we didn't know we were capable of.. As we discover and allow our many dimension - our voice creatures - to "play" through us, we experience an integration and healing akin to the joy of meeting a long lost friend...
